INITIAL SITUATION

A private home on the island of Ibiza, with a terrace and a view of the sea. The design of this new building was required to be light and modern, with a touch of typical Ibizan style. The view of the sea from the large window frontage had to be retained, despite the fact that drapes are needed to provide shade from the sun.

SOLUTION

Curtains made of the Soprano fabric were chosen for the whole house, on the basis of their lightness and touch. They made the space seem larger, providing protection from the sun yet creating a certain sense of airiness. When the sliding doors are opened to the terrace, the drapes move a little in the sea breeze that wafts in, producing the desired Ibiza feel of relaxation. The level of light in the bedroom can be reduced still further with additional dimming curtains.
